Advancis & Glosec will be launching new & innovative Security Applications at the Essen Trade Show 2016

Glosec will be exhibiting its latest development, Glosec Security Application (GSA), connecting security and people. The real-time team activity automation system can be integrated in the Physical Security Information System “WinGuard” by Advancis, an open software platform linking diverse security, building and communication systems of different manufacturers.

Amsterdam, Netherlands (2016) – Glosec Group will be exhibiting as part of the Advancis booth at the upcoming Essen Security Exhibition from September 27th to September 30th, 2016. It is the world’s leading security trade fair and Glosec will be introducing their new and innovative security system, GSA (Glosec Security Application) powered by Bravo.ai.

Glosec Security Application (GSA) simplifies the handling of any size of event providing team members with step-by-step response guidance, whilst improving performance. GSA connects multiple sensors to a desktop command center, that integrates both human communication and adaptive Standard Operating Procedures (SOP’s). GSA alerts its operators when anomalies are recognized and when man-made decisions are required. Thus, improves security team performance, increases service level, and reduces the risk of catastrophe, all with major savings on the cost of training. GSA is designed both for mobile and web.*

Advancis’s unique and innovative booth will be located in Hall 1, booth no. 1C12, and is expected to generate a great deal of interest, especially due to several security control centers that will provide the opportunity to experience the most recent developments of the current version of WinGuard: the function module “Control Operations”, offering a workflow enabling reliable control management (in particular for coupling of fire alarm systems), connection of latest communication systems via SIP and Voice over IP as well as the new WinGuard Android App.
